You Could Be Subject to Backup Withholding

We recently sent you a notice requesting your tax return or additional taxes owed. Our records show that you didn't report all your interest, dividends, or patronage dividends on your federal income tax return or you didn't pay the tax, penalty, or interest you owed on this income.

What you need to do

If you've already filed your return or paid all taxes due, including interest and penalties, please disregard this notice. You don't need to do anything more.

If you haven't filed your return or paid all the taxes due, you could become subject to backup withholding. This means the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) will notify your payers (banks, etc.) to withhold 24% of the payments you receive for dividends, patronage dividends, and interest. The payers will send the money to IRS and you may claim it as a withholding credit on your federal income tax return. To avoid backup withholding, please respond to the notice we sent you previously. If you don't have it, you will receive another one soon.

Please send your response in the envelope we have provided. This will help us process your response promptly.
